

Excavation Relationship

There are a number of ways someone can position a relationship like this with you:

A COACH - a coaching relationship is one where someone has a plan or playbook and asks you to come and work their plan. Your role is to learn the plan or the technique to make this coach successful. That is not me.

A MENTOR - a mentoring relationship is one where you pull yourself up next to someone who is an expert in something in hopes that they will help you become an expert at that same area. That is not me.

AN EXCAVATOR - an excavating relationship begins with a strong belief that God has already given you and been speaking to you about his vision for you. An excavator is given the responsibility of unearthing what God has already given you that seems to be buried or hidden as of today. An excavator begins his work with you within incredibly powerful belief that God is already speaking to you, and my job is to clarify and organize and bring off the paper and out of your soul this incredible leadership God already intends for you.

That is definitely my calling.
